CHAPTER FOUR

Induced Transition

A series of unfortunate occurrences, information and circumstances that send the individual experiencing them on a plummet to lower levels of reality. The Induced Transition is initiated when an individual focuses their attention on a negative event and in doing so, exponentially materializes more negative events. Continued attention and energy will cause the frequency of negative events to accelerate faster and faster, finally leading to a climactic event and the dispersion of all that built up energy into the Alternatives Space. This is followed by a temporary calm. Also referred to as the “Wave of Misfortune.”

Becoming captivated by Pendulums that display lifelines heavy with disaster, war, poverty, and violence, can cause the onset of an Induced Transition. Respond to the first prod of the Pendulum and you will become emotionally hooked. For example, let's say you tune into a negative event and allow it to trigger a strong emotional reaction in you. In so doing, you've participated in creating a downward spiraling vortex. Beware, it will take you down if you don't rebalance your Importance levels immediately.

Characteristics of an individual who has become absorbed by a negative vortex may include victim mindset, depression, anxiety and feeling agitated by the world.

The frequency of these emotions corresponds to lower levels of reality. Negative external circumstances may cause an individual to continue feeding the negative vortex with thought energy, satisfying the Pendulum's intentions to disable and confuse you for the purpose of energy extraction. Consequently, your reality becomes created by external Pendulums.

Imagine a downward spiral leading to rock bottom where your vital life forces are ceaselessly harvested by ambiguous forces for ambiguous purposes.

Importance

Importance emerges anytime something, someone, or some situation, is assigned excessive value. There are two kinds of importance: Internal and External.

Internal Importance is an overvaluation or overestimation of one's virtues or shortcomings. Examples: "I am an important person" or "I have an important job". When levels of importance tip the metaphysical scale, external forces activate to level out the imbalance. Those who perceive themselves as doing important jobs or as being important people, are in for disappointment. In fact, ensure themselves a fall from grace. The flip side of Importance, an under-evaluation of one's own qualities through self-humiliation and self-deprecation, also triggers correction. In both cases, the magnitude of the imbalance is the same. The difference is only in polarity.

External importance is also artificially created by a person when they assign too great a value to an object or an event. Examples: "I NEED this new job" or "I MUST get my ex back". An imbalance is created and your whole endeavor seems to fall apart, as if the world is working against you.

Imagine that you are tasked with walking across a log on the ground without falling. Easy! Now imagine you must walk across the same log, only this time it has been placed between two skyscrapers. In both cases, you have the same objective of reaching the other side without falling. But a few stories up, you will likely feel the importance of successfully accomplishing your task. In this example, the space between you and the ground represents Importance levels. This imbalance will be corrected by what are known as Balancing Forces, causing you to lose your balance and fall off the log.

Excess Potential

Any time an object or event is assigned undue importance, the excess mental energy you give over will create tension in the local energetic field. Take desire, for example. Desiring something will cause Excess Potential because it acknowledges—with strong emotion—the absence of your object of desire. The excess value placed on its absence will create a polarizing effect. The greater your desire, the further away you will push the Lifetrack which holds your desire.

Strongly desiring something you don't currently have creates an energetic "pressure difference". Balancing Forces will then show up to correct the pressure imbalance.

This often leads to the realization of whatever is opposite your intended result.

Example: An individual wants to be rich, and they want to get rich quick. This individual has acknowledged their lack of wealth by emitting a frequency of strong desire. In their frantic wanting state, they'll make foolish investments and end up losing money rather than gaining money. They reach quickly and forcefully for money, repelling the desired coordinates. Feeling the loss, they try even harder, and in doing so increase the pressure difference. The harder they push, the further away they move through The Alternatives Space from their desired Lifetrack.

Inducing

A tangible negative shift in mood, thought quality and frequency that usually marks the onset of an Induced Transition. Train yourself to notice these subtle shifts before they expand and envelope you.

Level One

The lowest level of reality available to you, personally. This Lifetrack holds misfortune, personal calamity, and a myriad of unpleasantness. Level One is where people typically commit suicide or engage suicidal ideation.

Variables

The infinite conditions that exist in The Alternatives Space. Variables are people, places, things, variations of scenarios and alternate scenarios. Basically, anything you could ever imagine exists as one data point in the infinite datasphere that is The Alternatives Space. To materialize the world you want to enjoy, you must identify the Variables that exist within it, and then pull them toward you and move yourself toward them using the Four Mechanisms of Reality Creation.

Intention

An Intention is a declaration to the world's mirror that you will have something, be something or do something. It represents your resoluteness to have and to act. Once an Intention is determined, your world will begin presenting options and Variables that align with the Intention you are seeking. When an Intention is declared, Cracks in the Matrix will begin to appear and the pathways to your Intention will illuminate.

Chemical Ascension

The activity of ingesting mood-altering substances, including alcohol, which give temporary boosts of euphoria and/or energy. Consider these substances energetic loans, which ultimately must be paid back with interest.

Reality Blinders

Worldviews and/or thought patterns that coalesce into a steadfast belief that no other version of reality exists. This is the perspective that there is one, static and unyielding reality. Tagline of someone wearing Reality Blinders: "It is what it is!"

Reality Spirals

A sudden, temporary, and momentous energetic occurrence, which sends a person spiraling up or down. These spirals gain momentum your adherence to a new theory and the thoughts, actions, and frequencies you adopt to enforce this new theory. These spirals can be neutralized by dropping Importance levels and checking in with your Four Mechanisms.
