Slide Magic

By: Renee Garcia

We are going to kick these modules off with the concept of Slides. Slides are a powerful tool for rapid materialization. I am going to give you a breakdown of what works for me but this is about finding exactly what works for you. You could use all of what I am suggesting, some of it, or use this knowledge to gain powerful insights of your own. Set the intention to evolve your Slide practice. It will pay off; I promise you that.

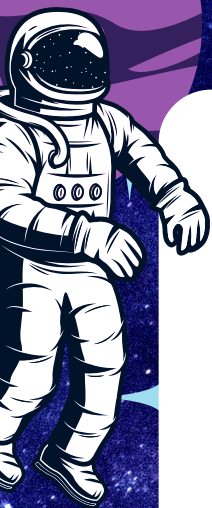

So, what is a Slide?

A slide is a mental image that is only in your mind. Every single living, breathing being on this planet is running a slide. It is a mental construct through which you perceive your world. Change your slide and you change your perception of your world. Change the perception of your world and you change your experience of it. Change your experience of it and you change how it responds to you.

Imagine you are standing in front of a giant mirror, with no Slide in between you and it, which is impossible, would result in you seeing nothing. There is absolute darkness and void of subject and matter. The Slide is what makes the image in the Mirror appear. The image is simply reflected back via the Mirror. The Slide can hold visual elements, sensations, and even emotion—it is invisible, yet tangible.

If your Slide is constructed of imagery of the world going to hell, fear, and sadness, this will be your experience of reality. You will highlight all that is within your reality that corresponds to your Slide. If your Slide is constructed of imagery of the world being yours for the taking, opportunity, and joy, this will be your experience of reality. Again, you will highlight all that is within your reality that corresponds to your Slide.

Slides can be broad and ambiguous or specific and detailed. It is of my personal experience that the more detailed and specific the slide, the more rapidly I can materialize it. I have a big Slide for the overall experience of life I intend and more specific smaller Slides which are my goals.

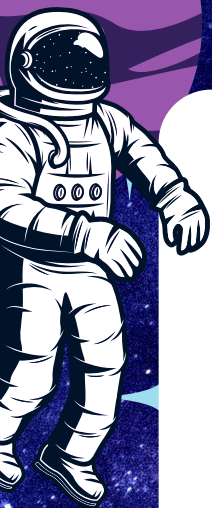

Example, my big Slide is constructed with imagery and sensations of me leading a comfortable, adventurous, and creative life. I envision myself never having to “work” a day of my life again, being creative daily, venturing into exotic and new sectors of reality on a whim. I see myself in these roles, feel myself there, and experience the embellished details in which I have chosen. As a response my perception through the Slide projects energy into my world which responds in real life imagery reflected back via my mirror. My outer world eventually corresponds to my inner world. It starts in my mind and crystallizes in real life through the Slide I have created.

My small Slide right now, or my goal based Slide, is that of having a fully furnished beautiful house, paid for and ready for maximum enjoyment with consistent income if rented. This smaller Slide is how I materialize the big Slide. I accomplish the smaller Slides one by one and move through my reality contributing to the actions required by me to materialize the bigger vision. It is working.

Imagine your Slide is like a magnet to reality, attracting exactly what it is you need to materialize that exact vision. Give up on your Slide and the Slide loses its magnetic pull. Feed your slide and it becomes exponentially powerful.

Your Slide needs fuel. The more attention you give it the stronger your world shows up with means to achieve it.

The Slide helps you tap into three necessary mechanisms of reality creation: thoughts, actions, and frequency. The Slide is the magnet powered by your energy and attention. Your energy consists of your thoughts, action, and frequency. We will get into this in detail in the next audio.

People often ask exactly how, when, and with what intensity they should run a slide. This is why it is valuable to choose a goal that is intended for you. Running your slide should never feel like a chore. If you need to set your alarm and timer to know when and how long you should run a slide, well, good luck. Your slide should feel like a fantasy, only one which is now coming to life. My slides feel luxurious when I run them. I get to experience beforehand the reality of my choosing with absolute delight. It feels good! Why would I need to set an alarm to feel good?

How you feel when running your slide is a good indicator of it being for you or possibly intended for someone else. If you do not get a sensation of absolute joy and elation when running your slide, it may be time to return to the drawing board and choose a new goal. A foreign goal will result in you not being able to tap into your slide at any moment.

I fall in love with my slides. I have chosen them well and they are aligned with the goals intended for me as an individual. I have a specific routine which allows me to enjoy them, which I will share with you.

Here are my favorite times to enjoy my slides...

Firstly, at night before bed as I'm drifting off to sleep. This is a powerful time to run a Slide. Just as we don't understand when we are dreaming, that we are dreaming, it is the same with running your Slide at night.

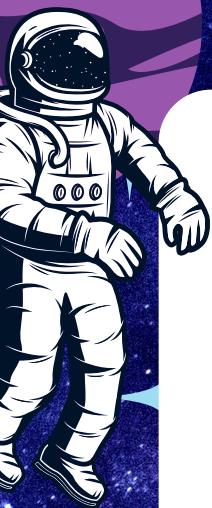

You are drifting in a state between wakefulness and being asleep and your mind doesn't necessarily understand the difference between what is real and what is not. Also, there are few distractions to separate me from my cerebral experience of the reality I intend to materialize.

I do my nightly self-care routine and as soon as my head hits the pillow, I begin to run my Slide. This is a very pleasurable time for me. As I drift off to sleep, I experience the exact reality of my choice.

Right now, it is running the slide of my Tbilisi home. I envision a light filled beautiful house with fresh Georgian air wafting through the windows. I see the home stylishly furnished, adorned with artwork and beautiful objects. I acknowledge how much I love the high ceilings, the crown moldings, and all of the architectural detail. Sometimes it's day and I'm simply preparing healthy food in the kitchen or it's night and I'm opening the door to friendly faces who have arrived for my catered Supra (an elaborate Georgian dinner experience with company).

I switch back-and-forth between first person and third. I am experiencing everything through my own eyes and sensually feeling all the embellished detail. I remark on how it is that I feel. I am emotionally calm, content, and filled with satisfaction for having completed the process of materializing this goal. Then, I view myself in the third person. I perceive my reality from a set of eyes slightly above me looking down on the physical version of me, watching my actions and movement. I remark on how well I fit into the environment, how the physical version of me appears, and how beautiful I am in this enlightened and satisfied state. This is how I fall asleep, switching back-and-forth, drifting into the dreamworld.

In the morning I feel energized to bring my 50%. I spring out of bed and immediately go about confirming all of the ways in which this Slide will materialize. I know the reality in my Slide is real as I just experienced it sensually. I do not want, I do not hope, I intend to materialize the Slide.

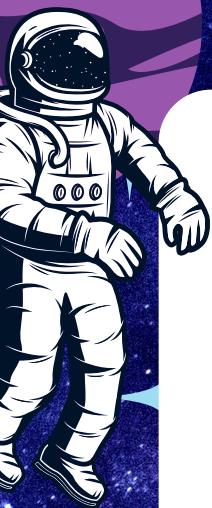

I do this in the deprivation tank at my local float center as well. I highly recommend this practice if this is an option for you. Floating in a deprivation tank is an otherworldly experience. It is in my belief that suspended in saline solution, with complete sensory deprivation, allows us a connection to the Alternative Space in which ideas, ways to fulfill the order, and higher information can flow in.

Much of what you see today within the International Transurfing Institute, the programs, my stories of switching lifetracks and all that I am doing, I've realized in moments within the deprivation tank and my nightly routine.

Embellishing your slide, running your Slide, and experiencing your slide, is only half of the process. You have to allow your world to feed you information and the ways and means in which the Slide can materialize. I also do this in the bath, and in a meditation I will give as the exercise for this module.

In the moments that I want to take a break, I lean back in my office chair or lay down on the grass at the park with my dogs and slip into my luxurious Slide. I do this because it feels good. This is not contrived imagination, but a blissful reprieve from the physical world. The better it feels the more your world will offer rapid and powerful assistance in materializing your vision.

I set my last goal 31 days ago to the moment that I am writing this. My goal and intention was to buy a beautiful piece of property at a good price in a foreign land that struck heart and mind coordination like a MF. 31 days later I am the outright owner of a beautiful brick house that exceeded my expectations that I bought $100,000 under market value.

I will continue to use this example throughout these modules, plus some others. I have utilized these techniques successfully in nearly all aspects of my life, from my thriving businesses, grand adventures, to my loving and nurturing romantic relationship with the man of my dreams, to the materialization of the International Transurfing Institute.

Once you have chosen your Slide, the steps to follow are how to materialize it. A steam engine cannot run with all valves open. I will instruct exactly how to get your steam engine going to maximum efficacy. A Slide is just a Slide if you don't know how to fuel it.

The steps to follow are hardcore. The people in your life might think you're fucking nuts. Let them. Show them. Let's do this!
