Reality Transurfing is actually very, very simple in practice, and the physics of how this modality works are almost beyond elementary. People coming to this knowledge tend to convince themselves otherwise.

Reality Transurfing is just a novel way of viewing reality; it's no more "hard" than your current system, just different. In my experience, Reality Transurfing is actually a whole lot easier than my pre-Reality Transurfing operating system. You are free to choose this way of viewing it for yourself, if you wish.

Reality Transurfing pushes back on conventional programming in some massive ways and I sometimes see others overcomplicating how to use it practically in their lives. Keeping on the old program just seems easier, even if it means them not getting what it is they want out of reality.

Your energy fuels your intentions. You harness and express your energy towards your Slide and thus materialize the version of reality of your choice. You give this energy to the Pendulums in your reality and you contribute to the materialization of the Slide the pendulum has chosen. It's as simple as that.

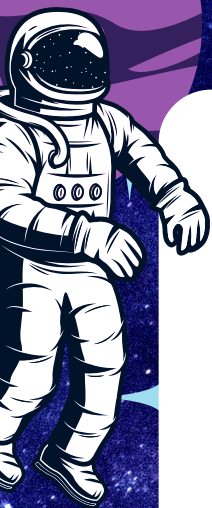

A quick story about a woman we will call "Dodo." Dodo had a very dysfunctional life leading well into her 50s. She was in an abusive marriage, lived in poverty and was destroyed by nearly every limiting belief that you could imagine. She was addicted to substances and struggled with emotional stability.

Dodo woke up one morning and realized that she wanted something higher and better for herself. She found Reality Transurfing and set out to clean up her layer of the world. She kicked her piece of crap husband to the curb and set about trying to get herself out of poverty.

She often reached out to me to help, not understanding what to do next. I would suggest setting the intention to connect with something that would ignite heart and mind coordination and then focus solely on that.

I would see her posting in the Facebook group and online about her daily family dramas even though she was now living alone and free to focus her energy into all that serves her. She then made a post in the Facebook group declaring that she had joined a protest organization against the abortion ban and that became her focus.

When she declared publicly all that she thought was wrong with the world, in regard to the abortion issue, I laughed at her post. "Aren't you supposed to be looking for the thing that's going to help you climb out of your situation and improve your circumstances?" I asked.

She shot back at me all of the reasons that the abortion protest was so important and that we all needed to come together to stand against the injustice.

I just laughed again and decided to allow her the space to evolve on her own.

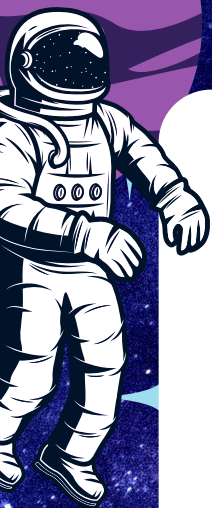

After that, she disappeared from the International Transurfing Institute into the Alternatives Space, and god only knows what version of reality.

Here's the deal: If you are in a state of needing to help yourself away from the bottom layers of reality, forget about the provocative pendulums du jour. They will tempt the weak with promises of being connected to a worthy cause, being a good person, making a difference, etc., etc., etc., but will do absolutely nothing to actually help you advance in your world—quite the contrary. There are an infinite number of them and again, they need your energy to materialize their intentions. They don't give a shit about you as an individual.

REALITY
TRANSURFING

If you are struggling with poverty, or finding a profession connected to both your heart and mind, or separating from abusive people, it might benefit you to take a long and honest look at why you are experiencing this layer of reality in the first place and even more valuably, why you can't seem to evolve up out of it.

Pendulums are absolutely responsible.

Short of your own children, nothing deserves your energy more than you do. If your reality isn't what you want it to be right now, it's time to get real.

Consider running an honest accounting sheet, showing you in full clarity where your energy is going and what is costing you. You will see a worksheet at the end of this module.

When I declare an intention to my world, my partner knows to stand the hell back (all other naysaying pendulums have already been cleared). I am about ready to perform some motherfucking magic and he knows it's in his best interest to assist me by either allowing me some space or jumping on board. He may offer a word or two of his thoughts, but he knows if I have set an intention, it's done. I'm going for it and it's going to be full on.

I have done some miraculous things for our partnership via my intentions, and have facilitated means to fulfill both of our goals. I have a proven track record of success so he mostly trusts my decisions once I have landed on a new goal. I have moved us to beautiful locations, created wealth which I have funneled into his goal, and have taken us on epic adventures to far off Lifetracks, and he likes this.

He is a very different person than I am, however, and always errs on the side of safety, moving through reality with a focus on risk management. Being from a different set of programming, he opted into the corporate world at a young age and spent over 20 years in an executive corporate position. His whole role professionally was to minimize risk and when we first got together he attempted to overlay his programming onto my mode of operation. This caused our collective layer of reality to wobble, and me personally to wobble. I felt stifled and hesitant, allowing him to influence me in the direction of doubting myself and my choices and fearing the associated risks. He wasn't trying to do me wrong, he was attempting to help in line with his programming, but it just wasn't in line with my modus operandi. It benefits the individual choosing new paths to distinguish this difference.

I quickly realized that I was going to have to show him that just because I operated in a different fashion didn't mean that I was ineffective. I would have to protect myself from him dissolving my Slides or my power. To start, I would do this by demonstrating my abilities.

Within a couple of years, he stopped doubting me and realized that when I set an intention, he needed to step back, because I intend success in all my endeavors. I work best when I have my space. I need to be able to do exactly what it is that I need to do in order to materialize my Slide, and he now respects this. Again, he may have a few words to say and sometimes he does extend some powerful insights, but I trust myself and he now trusts me. Past success is a powerful tool to help others along in joining your new Slide.

I invite him into my Slides. I do so with evocative storytelling that engages the senses, imagery, and any other material or information to substantiate what it is I am seeing, feeling, and intending.

If you have a pendulum in your life, be it a big faceless pendulum like politics or media, or more homestyle pendulums such as your husband, wife, boyfriend, girlfriend, children parents etc., you must learn to cast out the pendulums that refuse to agree with your intended direction and welcome those who can help you.

Savage, I know. But you are here for rapid materialization, right? If you want to truly do this, you've got to ditch the junk holding you back.

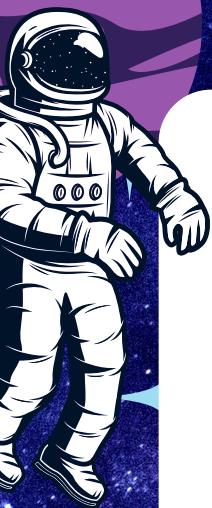

My partner helps me fulfill my order placed in my world now. Just before sitting down to write this module, I purchased my one-way airline ticket to fly back to my newly purchased home in Tbilisi, so I can furnish it and prepare it for some top shelf living.

We struck a deal: he watches the dogs and holds down the home fort for a month and I buy his airline ticket back to Tbilisi for the holidays, where we will enjoy our first time in the beautiful city together. Win-win, right? I get the assistance that I need to fulfill the actions necessary to materialize my Slide, and in exchange, he gets to experience what I have so vividly painted the picture of, that he is now excited to see in real life.

Two hours from Tbilisi, there is a world class ski resort, and with him being an avid skier, I knew exactly what to offer to sweeten the deal. I am Frailing him at a high level and again, in exchange, he is helping me to achieve my intention.

The other day, I even walked in on him watching videos of mountain biking the hills around Tbilisi. I have invited him into my world via my words, my actions, my imagination, and my frequency. I don't even think he considers the risks he laid out before me just a few weeks prior. He's onboard.

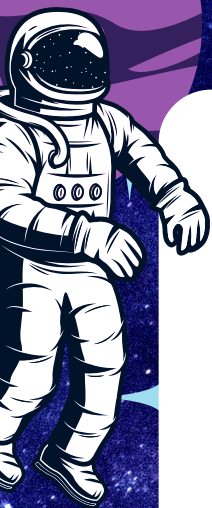

If a person isn't experiencing heart and mind coordination for themselves, they are more than happy to ride the coattails of your heart and mind coordination. You just need to make it appealing enough for them to jump on those coattails, offering them enough that is in line with their Soul Fraile. If you fail in this and those in your life refuse to join and continue constructing resistance, it might be time to ask yourself some questions.

I've been with my partner for five years and although he has disagreed with some of my Slides initially, he always jumps onboard and supports me. This person is for me. In turn, I support him and together we dance with our worlds, materializing our Slides and helping the other materialize theirs. I know this may not be everyone's situation, as your circumstances are unique to you, but there is a way to gain the support of those in your reality.

If your job is a pendulum keeping the majority of your energy for its own Slide materialization, it might be time to start asking yourself some questions there, too. The conventional employment pendulum does an extremely good job of convincing its adherents that there is simply no other way. I am walking proof that there is, and I have monetary and material success to back me up. Renegotiating the deal with the pendulum is real. If you did not listen to chapter 2 of A Tale of Practical Reality Transurfing, I highly suggest it. I will include it as a bonus if you missed it.

The bottom line is, for rapid materialization, you would absolutely benefit from cleaning up the pendulums in your reality.

Use frailing, and invite others into your Slide experience by showing them how much they will benefit. Put naysayers, the faceless pendulums harvesting your energy, and anything else distracting you in their place.

It's GO TIME and you will go much further much more quickly with freed up energy and space to move around. Don't burn bridges, however! Become a pendulum yourself and get others to help you. Your energy is valuable and their energy is valuable, too.

Okay, ready for the magic stuff?
